Dear Ed,

I was pleased to receive your letter and to learn that you were settled once more in a summer job which it is presupposed to be to your liking. Indeed, I am crossing my fingers in the hope that your recent interview with [] will bear good results. As the old saying goes, "Nothing ventured, nothing gained."

In retrospect it seems to me that a Monday morning quarterback session in the not too distant future might be in order. I was singularly impressed by your handling of matters during the recent get-together in Palo Alto. A get-together sometime just prior to your resumption of duties at the University would be best. This post mortem analysis of a two-three day duration could probably be best fitted in at the conclusion of your summer employment. Mindful of the fact that you will probably be driving back to Denver, you may want to fly from Denver here. Later in the month when you have had an opportunity to size up your future plans, I would be obliged if you would inform me as to when you might have the opportunity to come here (at our expense) to review recent undertakings. It goes without saying that your trip here should be based on the President's "fitness program" as has been the case in the past.

I wish you continued success in your coaching duties. With kindest, best regards,

Yours truly,
